Tales of the Vietnam War

"During the time of the war, I had no idea about it. I hardly ever watched any news," said Mike Pikulyk, a Vietnam War Veteran from the United States Army who visited St. Charles North on January 23. He, along with Vietnam War Veterans Duane Buttell, Air Force; Dennis Larson, Marine Corps; and Richard Zawislak, Navy, spoke to students about their experiences in the war.

Throughout the presentation, panelists shared pictures and stories that illustrated their time in Vietnam. Their descriptions of the places and villages where they served helped students understand the challenges they faced in the jungle. "The mosquitoes were crazy, and we had to keep our feet dry at all times," said Mike, who contracted malaria during his time in Vietnam.

Students asked the panelists questions which helped them make connections to the topics they learned about in class. Many students were curious to know about the medical attention U.S. soldiers received while in Vietnam given how easily people could get sick. Others were more interested in the political side of the war as well as how the panelists' views about the war changed once they came back to the United States.

"We've been learning about Vietnam in our Modern American History class from books, poems, and essays, but bringing this primary source of knowledge allows students to hear a different point of view about the war," said History teacher, Mrs. Boehle, who along with the other Modern American History teachers helped bring the veterans to St. Charles North.

"We will debrief in our next class and based on this research, students will write a paper connecting the concepts and ideas they learned to better understand how our country has changed and transformed," added Mrs. Boehle.

The Windmill Blade Design Challenge

Students in the PLTW Energy and Environment class at Thompson were challenged with designing windmill blades from cardboard or index cards that could lift as much mass as possible in the least amount of time. They had the freedom to design the blades however they wanted and incorporate as many blades as the windmill could hold. While some opted for flat blade designs, others used blades with curved edges and even shaped them like cones with angled openings to capture the wind. One team decided to incorporate two different blade designs and tested their model to see which blade design moved the windmill faster.

Using a fan, they powered their windmills to lift a bucket where they added weight. As they continued to add weight, they recorded their observations until the windmill could no longer move. When the blades did not catch the wind, students made adjustments by adding cardboard for weight or completely modifying the blade designs.

Part of the challenge was to also lift as much weight as possible in the least amount of time, so even if a group's windmill could lift a lot of weight, they had to make sure it was done quickly. The engineering design teams made modifications until they were satisfied with their model. One team's windmill was even able to lift 45 grams!

◆◆◆ We Want Your Feedback! ◆◆◆

District 303 participates in the annual Illinois 5Essentials Survey that collects feedback from our students, teachers, and parents. Your participation in the parent portion of the survey will enable you to share your thoughts on important elements of school effectiveness. All responses are confidential and will never be connected to you or your child.

The Parent Survey is currently open and will remain so through February 14, 2020. To take the survey, please visit <https://survey.5-essentials.org/Illinois/> and select the appropriate survey. Make sure you enter Kane County in the box for county even if your home or your child's school is in DuPage County. This will allow you to correctly select your child's school.

Parent University News

When we asked parents to tell us what kind of programming they wanted as part of our Parent University series, many asked us to produce videos that can be watched in the comfort of their own homes and on their own schedules. In that same survey, parents requested information about how Project Lead the Way has enhanced student learning in classrooms from kindergarten through high school. As stories of underage vaping continue to permeate the news, parents are also looking for strategies they can use to begin conversations with their children about the dangers.

The District 303 Video Vault has two new videos – one about Project Lead the Way and the other one about vaping. We hope that the Project Lead the Way video gives you some questions to ask your child about the skills he or she has learned in PLTW. We also encourage you to watch the video about vaping with your children and talk to them about the health risks and dangers associated with it.

From Wredling to the Nile River

Wredling 6th graders have been studying the impact geography has on ancient civilizations in their social studies class. To better understand the significance of the Nile River in Ancient Egypt, students applied STEM skills to transform a regular 2D map into a 3D map of the Nile using a variety of materials.

"They were given the basic layout of the map detailing the location of important structures around the Nile River, but they could use any materials they wanted to make the map 3D," said Social Studies teacher, Mrs. Rodriguez. While some students used a cookie cake and edible ingredients, others used clay, cardboard pieces, LEGOS, and even sand to make their 3D map resemble the real landscape around the Nile.

Once they finished their models, students reflected on how well they worked together, the obstacles they encountered, and what elements were successful for them to make their models as realistic as possible.

The "upstairs brain," which makes decisions and balances emotions, is under construction until the mid-twenties. Conversations will be based upon the book as well as supplemental workbook activities.
