Math being a challenge for students has been depicted in the media since "Leave it to Beaver." Math being a challenge for parents has been depicted in the media as recently as Mr. Incredible helping Dash with his math at the dinner table in last summer's "Incredibles 2." To that end, please, mark your calendars for MATH MADNESS the evening of March 7! We don't want math to be any more challenging for you or your Eagles than it should be.

Our aim is to show families more of the why and the how behind what we do in math class today. Certainly, math is taught differently than the way we were taught it as kids. However, I say this a lot, I wish I was taught math the way our kids are learning it today. When we were kids, many of us were taught math through rote memorization. We knew that $2 \times 4 = 8$, but didn't know why it was so and how to apply that conceptual knowledge to other multiplication, division, or even addition problems. Memorizing that is nice. It helps us quickly solve 2×4 ; however, know why $2 \times 4 = 8$ unlocks doors for our students as they learn about math.

We look forward to seeing you here at Norton Creek the evening of March 7 for Math Madness, and hope that it unlocks a few doors for you too. All you want to do is to help your sons and daughters at the kitchen table as they work through math homework, and then they tell you "you're doing it wrong." I'm here to tell you that you're not doing it wrong, and we're here to help.

Enjoy a nice, long, relaxing, fun weekend, Norton Creek! We look forward to our learning tomorrow as a teaching team and to seeing our Eagles bright and early Tuesday morning!
